A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER may not necessarily be an accurate indication of future TER's. Transaction Costs are a necessary cost in administering the financial product and impacts financial product returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of financial product, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Many investors worry that we are entering bear market territory in US equities. In recent weeks, there has been a sharp pullback in many leaders, with the magnificent seven not looking as magnificent as before. Their combined performance, since reaching a peak in late December, is a decline of just over 15%. President Trump has created chaos with everything from trade wars to currency wars initiated since the start of his second term. Interpreting all of this together over such a short period seems complicated. One clue as to President Trump's thinking may be found in a paper entitled "A Users Guide to Restructuring the Global Trading System" by Stephen Miran from Hudson Bay Capital, dated Nov 2024. In his paper, Miran argues that the root cause of economic imbalance lies in persistent dollar overvaluation that prevents the balancing of international trade, and that this overvaluation is driven by inelastic demand for reserve assets. Miran argues for tariffs and dollar devaluation. What is the impact on financial markets? Volatility has increased along with equity risk premium. The rotation out of high-growth, high-beta stocks in the US has been marked. Conversely, more defensive sectors have performed well. Portfolio positioning over the past two months has remained defensive.

An analysis of factors affecting the adherence to the policy objective is contained in the fund manager commentary together with performance as reported. A detailed listing of changes from the previous quarter is available on request from info@miplan.co.za or clientservices@ipmc.co.za.
