The Total Expense Ratio (TER) of the value of the financial product was incurred as expenses relating to the administration of the financial product. The Transaction Cost (TC) of the value of the financial product was incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of underlying assets within the financial product. Total Investment Charges (TIC) of the value of the financial product was incurred as costs relating to the investment of the financial product. The TER, TC and TIC figures are inclusive of VAT. The period (annualised) was from 1 April 2022 to 31 March 2025.

Transaction Costs are a necessary cost in administering the financial product and impacts financial product returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of financial product, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Financial markets have started to reflect one of two potential outcomes. Under the first scenario President Trump is wildly successful at attracting capital investment into the US as he sledgehammers companies to invest. Economic growth is enhanced through the massive stimulus package recently passed by Congress (OBBA); companies adapt to the new tariff environment, take advantage of tax cuts, and seek out new opportunities globally as Trump opens new markets. Labour disruptions settle and the low end of the jobs market finds substitution with many allowed to re-enter the US under special legislation. Tariff revenue, currently at $25bn ytd, starts to address the deep costs associated with Trumps presidency after DOGE was shown for what it was – a deeply disruptive marketing scam at best. At this point you may be thinking of Alice in Wonderland where Trump thinks to himself "why, sometimes I've believed as many as six impossible things before breakfast." The second, and far more likely scenario, is that financial markets have started to enter their first phase of mania territory. Unlike bull markets that are built around falling inflation, lower interest rates and sustained corporate earnings growth, the current environment is decidedly fragile. Abundant liquidity is leading to a range of explosive price changes in crypto and FAANG stocks that dwarf previous bubble peaks. Crypto is particularly leveraged as this market lends itself to massive transaction flows that have zero regulatory oversight.

An analysis of factors affecting the adherence to the policy objective is contained in the fund manager commentary together with performance as reported. A detailed listing of changes from the previous quarter is available on request from info@miplan.co.za or clientservices@ipmc.co.za

A statement of changes in the composition of the portfolio during the reporting period is available on request. The performance is calculated for the portfolio. The individual investor performance may differ as a result of initial fees, the actual investment date, the date of reinvestment and dividend withholding tax. The fund is invested in portfolios of collective investment schemes that levy their own charges, and which could result in a higher fee structure for the fund.
