Manager Commentary

Fund commentary

The nReach Capital IP Worldwide Flexible Fund delivered a return of +0.95% in August 2025, generating a positive result in a complex and fast-changing market environment. The ASISA Multi-Asset Flexible sector average had a positive return of +1.92% and fund remained firmly aligned with its central objective of delivering steady, risk-adjusted returns with a focus on "High predictability, Low volatility."

Local equity holdings were a key contributor to performance, supported by the JSE Top 40's +3.75% advance, as improving domestic and global sentiment lifted risk assets. The fund's tactical positioning allowed it to capture part of this upside while maintaining prudent risk exposure.

Fixed income exposure also added positively, with the S&P South Africa Sovereign Bond 1+ Year Index gaining +1.89%. This allocation continues to provide portfolio stability, reduce volatility, and generate consistent income.

Looking forward, the fund remains cautiously positioned but adaptable, focusing on selective opportunities and disciplined risk management to navigate ongoing uncertainty while creating long-term value for investors.

Market Commentary

Global equities posted gains in August, underpinned by solid economic data and strengthening investor confidence. The S&P 500 rose +1.91%, while the MSCI World ETF climbed +2.79%, reflecting broad-based but regionally uneven performance. U.S. markets led the way, supported by resilient corporate earnings and continued moderation in inflation.

In South Africa, bonds delivered strong returns, with the Satrix Government Bond ETF (STXGOV) rising +1.23%. The rally was driven by the South African Reserve Bank's 25 bps interest rate cut, marking a shift toward monetary easing as inflation pressures eased.

The rand strengthened against the U.S. dollar during the month, further boosting local market sentiment and reinforcing the supportive backdrop for South African assets.

Overall, August 2025 was characterised by global equity momentum, a rebound in local bonds, and rand appreciation — highlighting the value of maintaining a balanced, diversified investment approach
